

VIKING SYSTEMS TO APPEAR ON NORMAN SCHARZKOPF'S HEALTH JOURNAL TELEVISION SERIES

August 26, 2007 on CNBC (as paid programming)

Boca Raton, FL - August 23, 2007 ---Multi-Media Productions (USA), Inc. announces that Viking Systems will appear on Health Journal Television, hosted by General Norman Schwarzkopf.

Millions of Americans have surgery each year. This segment of Health Journal Television explores how Viking Systems helps surgical teams with minimally invasive procedures, helping to provide with improved results and faster recovery times.

Donald E. Tucker, president and chief executive officer of Viking Systems stated, "As minimally invasive surgery continues to grow in prevalence and patient preference, it is important that hospitals adopt the types of advanced technologies that make this trend more feasible. Surgeons are immediately recognizing the added clinical value 3D vision provides them. 3D technology allows laparoscopic surgeons the opportunity to restore their natural vision, facilitate depth cues and maximize dexterity; benefits which translate into a higher standard of care for those patients who are fortunate to benefit from it."

Coordinating producer, Richard Linderman added, "Minimally invasive surgery is improving patient results as well as cost to healthcare facilities. Viking Systems 3D technology helps the surgeon by restoring his natural visual environment. Viking Systems is a valued participant to Health Journal Television."
